

We, the People, Have Power

Change the world empathically
so that the people in power
become regular people.
Maybe they'll still have fame or infamy,
but they'll become just regular
in terms of having the means
to influence and manipulate others.
Without power and money,
they can't pay to enforce their position
nor pay away any of their anti-empathic acts.

How can we change the world empathically
where those in power
become regular people?

Step 1.

The awareness of what an empathic world is
is spread to as many people as possible.

Step 2.

Empathic ways and behaviors
become widespread.

Step 3.

On one day, enough people
16% of the population
altogether stop using money
and any means of exchange,
but continue to operate society, empathically.

Then, as people begin to adjust,
they shift the whole of society
as an empathic world.

The very many build and operate society.
The very few prosper massively
and own much of society.
What ties it all together?
Money, but it goes deeper than that.
In this world, you either "earn or starve."
So, you get a job, a career, a profession
to earn money.
We spend ourselves physically, mentally and emotionally in exchange for money.
In other words,
we've given our power to money.
We've given meaning to money.
And what do most people do
with their hard earned money?

They spend it on the essentials:
on food, water, clothing, shelter,
but also on things they don't really need.

How can the average person counter
the ever present bombardment of ads
psycho-socio-emotionally getting us to want things we don't really need?

So, the masses transfer their power
to money.
The few know how to accumulate money
and thus accumulate all of that power
that it represents.
And they buy up everything,
including the law,
while short-changing the rest of us.

Imagine that one day,
the very many decided
to stop using money
and any means of exchange,
but continued to operate society,
so that it wouldn't collapse.

The very few would no longer have the means to continue to pay
to enforce the old ways.

Tremendous resources and patents
would be freed up.
Trade secrets and know-how
would be opened up.

Ownership would revert to the commons.

You'll get to have what you can manage,
empathically,
without a robot army, of course.

And most importantly,
those in power would become
as regular people.

No guillotine; just treated empathically.
They'll be not that much more empowered
than the rest of us.

We, the people, have power, naturally.
